

WASHINGTON-Congressman Spencer Bachus is pleased to announce the University of Alabama Birmingham will receive $1.08 million for the AIDS Center for Research. "UAB is leading the fight on AIDS, and I am pleased to see that they are receiving the funds they need to continue their valuable work", said Congressman Bachus.

The grant, provided by the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases, is core funding to support the Center's infrastructure and to promote multi-disciplinary AIDS research at UAB.

According to Congressman Bachus, "Research made possible by this grant will help defeat AIDS, and eventually other diseases that effect the human immune system."