

WASHINGTON (November 16) – Congressman Spencer Bachus (AL-6) tonight responded to false allegations in the book Throw Them All Out during an interview on the Kudlow Report on CNBC.

To view the interview, click here.

To view a copy of the letter that Congressman Bachus sent to the publisher detailing serious untruths and factual errors about him in the book, click here.

UPDATE

Excerpt from Washington Post, "Bill to ban insider trading in Congress is suddenly popular," December 1, 2011

"(Congressman) Bachus denounced the implication that he had used insider information gleaned from a briefing with then-Treasury Secretary Henry M. Paulson, Jr. He also said the book erred when it said he made a bet that General Electric stock would fall."

"The book is absolutely false and factually incorrect when it states that I 'shorted General Electric options' and did so 'four times in a single day,'" Bachus wrote in a statement to the publisher. 'The truth is I bought call options on General Electric stock, which is an investment made when one thinks a stock will rise.'

"Schweizer has admitted that he made a mistake on the GE trades."